RIWI Recognized by the Financial Times as an Americas' Fastest Growing Company

Toronto, ON – RIWI Corp. (CSE: RIW) (OTC: RWCRF) (the “Company” or “RIWI”), a global trend-tracking and prediction technology firm, has been recognized by the Financial Times in its first annual ranking of The Americas' Fastest Growing Companies 2020. RIWI is one of 500 of the fast-growing companies recognized as propelling the economy by generating prosperity and sustaining market competitiveness.

RIWI's Chief Executive Officer, Neil Seeman, said, “I am proud of our RIWI team for an unwavering dedication to deliver client service excellence every day. Even during these turbulent economic times, we continue to grow.”

The Financial Times award honours 500 outstanding companies among the millions of North and South American enterprises. The rating is the result of a joint project by the Financial Times and Statista. The results were achieved by conducting months of research, public calls, database research, and directly contacting tens of thousands of companies.

The Financial Times and Statista note: “As a sizeable chunk of fast-growing companies tend to be privately held and detailed financial information not made public, a ranking such as this can never claim to be complete. Yet the fact that about 90 per cent of the companies featured here are unlisted – and that the screening process was rigorous – means the ranking offers readers a glimpse into the black box that is private companies.”

RIWI is proud to be part of the approximately 10 percent of public companies on this ranking. Our most recent audited financial statements were published on March 5, 2020.
